The night before the first day of school always has a feeling. You lay your clothes down on your desk with a jitters, imagining yourself wearing it walking into your first class. After taking your everything shower, you feel ready for tomorrow and prepared. As you climb into bed, you get a notification on your phone without fail from a friend. “Ready For It?”

Going into the year, everybody had mixed feelings. Am I going to have fun? Are all my friends from last year going to be here? Am I going to enjoy the experience of a new school?

But we knew we were ready for it- we would be in time at least. We studied for the tests nights before, we practiced consistently for our games, we picked out our clothes for Dot Day. We finished our test with a good score, we won our games, we showed our raider spirit during spirit week.

On the last day of school, we didn't have to ask if we were ready for it. We had done it. We had conquered a year of nervous thoughts.

We knew we would have to do it again. Eighth graders preparing themselves to be freshmen, middle schoolers getting ready for summer and the next year.

We're ready for it.
